ScriptPacket 1.3 - a toolkit to enable CGI scripts to interact with the browser # Author: Dave Rolsky # Website: This version of ScriptPacket was based on the version described in "New world, new challenges" # To get the most out of this package you need to know some HTML, some Perl and some CGI. # I have seen it recommended that you have some knowledge of some of these things before # starting ScriptPackets. # For this reason I do not recommend that you use this package from a directory which # you have not yet had some experience of. # # There are several ways that ScriptPackets can be used: # * A full session-oriented package such as any web server (mod_perl, lighttpd, apache, etc) # * If you don't want to do a full session you can just use it as a standalone program # that you run with `perl Package_name.pl` # * You can even just use it as a standalone CGI script. # * The 'quick and dirty' option is to use it as a CGI script and just use it that way. # * Some parts of it are very good for doing that. # * ScriptPacket is also good for prototyping your own Perl tools. # # Do a 'sudo make' to build the
